RMRI, LLC. Property Security Points

Home Security starts with a frame of mind! Think about what causes or “tempts” the “bad guys” into looking at you as a potential victim!!

Be careful about what information you make available about yourself, your family, and your home on social media! Don't discuss travel plans. Don't display your valuables. Also be careful about what information you discard with your trash in the weeks prior to the Holiday Season.

Make sure that you turn off tracking on your digital devices (cell phones and tablets), AND on your social media (Facebook, Foursquare, Twitter, etc., etc.).

Leave some lights on in your house. Try to make it appear that someone is at home. Also leave a porch light on.

Leave a radio or a television playing in your house. Again, try to make it appear that someone is home!

Make sure all of your doors and windows are locked and secured.

Put stickers up that advertise that your house is protected by a security system (even if it is not). Give The Bad Guys Something To Think About Before Breaking Into Your Home!

Consider installing a security system in your home. Security systems are relatively economical now, and professional installation is also fairly economical.

If you are going out of town for the holidays for an extended amount of time, consider hiring a professional company such as a professional security company or a private investigation company to conduct security spot checks on your residence and/or business. Make sure that you hire a professional company that has credentials and is insured!

These are the basics, just following these simple basic precautions should narrow the odds of you and your family being victimized!
